Ted Grevelis joins Midwest Thoroughbred covering Minnesota racing

MWT is pleased to announce that Ted Grevelis is joining the magazine as Contributing Editor covering the Minnesota racing scene.

Born in Peabody, MA, Ted cut his racing teeth at the Harness and Thoroughbred tracks of New England. A 1987 graduate of Colby College in Waterville, ME, Ted and his best friend, the late writer Paul J. Mooney, would be known to frequent Lewiston Raceway and once even made a weekend of attending Suffolk Downs, Rockingham Park and Scarborough Downs before returning to classes. While enrolled at the University of Maryland for a short stint in graduate school, Ted helped pay tuition as a teller at Pimlico and the old Freestate Raceway when both were owned by the legendary DeFrancis Family. His time in Maryland and Washington, D.C. contributed to his near unhealthy attachment to the Preakness Stakes as his favorite Triple Crown race.

In addition to time served in the gaming industry, Ted has been both a Thoroughbred and Standardbred owner since 2005 and currently runs his own racing partnerships with horses running at Canterbury Park, Remington Park and Tampa Bay Downs. A freelance writer, Ted contributes to various on-line gaming sites, the Daily Racing Form, authors his own blog about his racing experiences, "Owning Racehorses", and hosts an occasional horse racing show as a companion to the written blog on Blog Talk Radio.

Ted lives in Minnesota with his lovely and understanding wife, Theri, and three boys: Garrett, Benjamin and Forrest.
